

DEALING WITH DISRUPTIVE BEHAVIORS IN MEETINGS

Ann Weaver, NOAA Office for Coastal Management

This skill building session is designed for anyone whose meetings are not as productive as they could be when disruptions take them off track. At the end of this session, participants will understand how to intervene and redirect the disruption, know where to go for intervention techniques, and will have practiced using those techniques.

Participants will use a mobile website, "Dealing with Disruptive Behaviors" on their personal device to look up the process, and identify techniques for 10 types of disruptions.

And if any disruptions occur during the session (and they will!) participants will have an opportunity to intervene and redirect the meeting back onto the agenda track. Who knew that disruptions could be so much fun!
